MONTHLY MESSAGE

Dear Friends,

Yes, it is true. We have seen Robin Red Breasts! Spring is coming and along with lots of activities.

BIG Bingo is on Saturday, March 25. Advance ticket cost is $20.00 and day of will be $25.00

As you know there was a problem with having Tax Preparation by AARP at our Center. AARP has provided us with several alternate locations which are not too far from the King of Prussia area where you can have your taxes prepared (listed in this newsletter). Beginning next year AARP plans to continue having tax preparation here at our Senior Center.

Our "Flea Room" opens on March 20. It will be open Monday through Thursday from 9:30 AM to 1:30 PM (no Fridays). The Flea Market and Bake Sale will be held on Saturday, April 22 from 9:00 AM to 1:00 PM.

We are having an "Unwhine and Paint" party with our favorite artist and instructor Sanford Molinaro on April 28. Cost is $20.00 and you can register in the staff office.

We have a couple of theater trips planned for 2017. The Tropicano Casino in Atlantic City on Monday, June 26 for the "Rat Pack" show (9:00 AM to 1:00 PM) and some gambling. Then, on Friday, July 14 we have planned a bus trip to Hunterdon Hills Playhouse for their presentation of "The Land We Love". Also, don't forget to check out the trips planned by the Excursion Committee Group which are listed in this newsletter. If you are interested in any of these trips we urge you to put your name on the "interest" sign up sheets in the lobby area as the first two trips mentioned have a minimum attendance required.

We hope you will enjoy our many activities and classes and we encourage you to participate. You will be so happy you did.

As always, come spend some time with us and remember to always say something nice about UMSSC.

KEEPING SENIORS INFORMED

DECODING FOOD LABELS

When you think about it, it seems that nearly everything has a label on it; including clothing, household furnishings and many other items. Perhaps some of the many labels on food items are confusing when you try to interpret what they mean. Some clarifications may be helpful.

Manufacturers' and food suppliers' suggestions are to identify the "peak quality" time periods. "Best by" or "best if used by" gives an estimate of when food will no longer be at its highest quality. "Use by" is an estimate of the last date the food is at its peak quality. "Sell by" is the suggested date for the grocer to no longer sell the product based on the idea that the quality will still be good for a reasonable time if it is purchased by that date.

Calories listed represent the total calories per serving. Look to see what the size of the serving is. For small packages you may assume the calories listed are for the whole package when it is actually for a portion of the package. "Calorie free" means there are fewer than five calories per serving. However, to reduce calories to this level there may be a higher percentage of other chemicals in it. "Low calorie" indicates there are 40 or fewer calories per serving. "Reduced calories" means that there are 25 percent fewer calories compared to the original item and serving size. "Light or lite" has 33 percent fewer calories compared to the original and its serving size.

The amount of sodium per day is advised to be limited to 1500 mg (milligrams) especially for persons over 50 years of age, African Americans, persons with high blood pressure, diabetes or kidney disease. A goal is to have 500 mg or less per meal. "Sodium free" means there is less than 5 mg per serving. "Very low" sodium indicates 35 mg or less per serving. "Light or lightly salted" means there is at least 50 percent less sodium than in the regular product. "Low sodium" products have 150 mg or less per serving. "No salt added" or "unsalted" tells you that no salt is added during the processing; however, it does not mean the food is sodium free.

"Reduced fat" means there is 25 percent less fat per serving compared to the original item. (Be aware that less fat often means there may be more sugar to make it more palatable.) "Lot fat" products have 3 grams or less of fat per serving. "Fat free" indicates that there is 0.5 grams of fat per serving. Eventually, trans fat will be removed from food products, but until then, the term trans-fat should show less than 0.5 grams per serving.

Sugar grams include both natural and added sugars. The revised food labels due this year (2017) will indicate the amount of added sugar. Until then, look for the term "no sugar added" on the label. It is advised to limit identified (added) sugar to 25-35 grams per day. One teaspoon contains 4-5 grams of sugar. You can see how sugar grams can add up quickly.

Vitamins and minerals are shown in percentages of daily values. They are often based on a 2000 calorie diet, which may be a larger amount than many seniors need since they often do not need as many calories. "Excellent source of" indicates that the food has 20 percent or higher of the daily value of the vitamin or mineral. "Good source of" means the food has 10-19 percent of the daily value. "Enriched" means that the food does not naturally contain that vitamin or mineral, so it has been added.

The ingredient section of the label may be the most difficult to comprehend. The important thing to know is that the ingredients are listed in order from the most amount to the least amount. So if you are choosing the product for protein, that term should be the first one on the list. Flavorings, colorings, preservatives and other additives are here. Many things listed may be chemicals with unpronounceable names. The fewer unpronounceable names the better.

Labels relating to refrigeration of products may also appear. The best way to insure food safety is to keep the refrigeration at 40 degrees or cooler. The dates on foods help to assure you that the food is safe to use; but do not ignore other signs such as a change in color, softness, it smells "off" or feeling slimy. The upper shelves are the warmest and the place to store items like drinks, eggs and ready to use items like cheese. The lower shelves are the coolest and best for foods with a higher risk for spoiling like meat, poultry and fish. Store those items in trays to prevent dripping. Put most vegetables, especially those that wilt, in the high humidity drawer. The door of the refrigerator is the warmest part of the refrigerator. Condiments and items like pickles do well on the door as do sodas.

Being observant of the information on labels can help in having a safe and healthy eating plan which we all need. Reading labels in the grocery store will add to your shopping time, but getting the healthy benefits is the important focus. Keep reading!
